

Megan E. Bryant

Author of Books
for Children &
Young Adults

Programs for Children and Teens

Readasaurus

For Preschool and Kindergarten

This engaging event helps children master early learning concepts like counting, colors, and shapes. A special emphasis on children's creativity encourages students to tell stories, create art, and always use their imaginations.

Ready, Set, Glow! Firefly Fun

For Grades 1 – 3

Fireflies aren't just the stars of summer nights—they're an important resource for scientists who are fighting diseases and searching for life in outer space. This interactive presentation includes a science experiment, a hands-on demonstration of firefly communication, and a fun pop quiz.

Mythology Masters

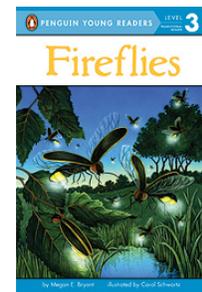

Option 1: For Grades 4 and 5; Option 2: For Grades 6 – 8

The greatest stories from Greek mythology come to life in this dynamic presentation. Together, we'll make mythology come alive by mixing fact, fantasy, and most of all, fun!

Life of a Writer

For all ages

In this presentation, my life becomes an open book where kids learn what writers really do all day. With an emphasis on storytelling as an essential part of life, students will leave this session feeling inspired to tell their own stories—whether they're true or not!

For more information, visit www.meganebryant.com or send an email to megan@meganebryant.com.

Megan L. Bryant

Author of Books
for Children &
Young Adults

Programs for Adults

Breaking into Children's Publishing

Participants will gain an understanding of the current business climate for children's books, providing a solid foundation for pitching a manuscript in today's competitive conditions. We'll also discuss tips, tricks, and advice about writing for children.

Writing for Children: Picture Books and Board Books

Picture books and board books have the potential to turn a small child into a lifelong booklover. We'll explore character and plot development, writing on particular themes, and elements that lead to success. Participants will learn how to create charming, captivating books for the littlest readers.

Writing for Children: Chapter Books and Novels

Ready to write a longer work? We'll examine the differences between chapter books, middle grade novels, and young adult novels as we discuss techniques for writing for independent readers. With candid advice about tackling tough subjects and a focus on incorporating humor, honesty, and hope, participants will gain the tools they need to write for one of today's most popular markets.

Beating Writer's Block

Anyone who has put words on paper has struggled with writer's block. In this talk, participants will learn techniques to help overcome writer's block and open the channels of creativity so that the next time writer's block strikes, they'll be ready to fight back!

Testimonials

"Writing children's books is deceptively hard to do well. Teaching others to write for children is even harder. Rare is the writer in whom both skills meet as harmoniously as in Megan. That she is a pleasure to work with doesn't hurt, either."—Ed Southern, Executive Director, North Carolina Writers' Network

"Thank you so much for sharing with our class yesterday! You are such a talented author and speaker and it was a genuine delight to have you with us! Several of my children are so excited about creating their own books! I must say you enlightened me as well."—Leigh Ann Pernell, kindergarten teacher

For more information, visit www.meganebryant.com or send an email to megan@meganebryant.com.